Joel Boudreau

has been sculpting since he was 12 years old. Originally from Dunlop (New Brunswick), he began his career by carving wood. After, he completed a Bachelor in Fine Arts at University of Moncton and pursued computer design at Cégep Ste-Foy (Quebec). His artistic journey leads him to Paris in 1997, where he deepens his computer illustration skills in a design company. In 2000, he traveled to Africa, where he explores the basics of bronze casting's ancient techniques. He also took classes to learn the basics of Blacksmith, jewelry, sculpture and patinas. Simultaneously, he made illustrations for children's books.

Winner of several grants from the Arts Council of New Brunswick and the Arts Council of Canada, he created numerous sculptural and installative works using wood, metal, stone and other recycled materials and articles.

His works are part of the New Brunswick Art Bank and Louise-et-Reuben-Cohen Art Gallery. He exhibited in New Brunswick, Quebec and France. In 2010-2011, he received the Éloïze Award's Artist of the Year in Visual Arts (New Brunswick).

His artistic universe reflects a spiritual quest centered around concerns and existential issues about human's place in society. In 2013, Joel Boudreau has created a monumental work, for University of Moncton, about the relationship between doctors, patients and environment. Always searching to deepen his artistic approach, Joel went to an art's creation workshop in Banff's Arts Center (Alberta) in 2013. So far, he continues to explore his creativity and innovate through an exploration of new materials and subjects which can be converted into a work of art.
